- Horrible Visage- Whenever a person encounters the Parasite in its original form or absorbing someone, they must make a Guts Check TN -2 or flee in terror.
- Absorption- A Parasite has four “arms” that it uses to grapple the target onto its flesh, which is sticky (to get off a Parasite’s flesh a character must make an opposing strength roll. A Parasite gets +2 on this roll) and holds the target there. At the start of the next round the creature begins to be digested. The Parasite rolls a fighting check VS targets Vigor. The target takes 2d6 damage each attack. Once the target has been brought to incapacitated (there is no roll for death) they have been absorbed and the Parasite now assumes the identity and personality of that target.
- Immunity- Only fire damage hurts a Parasite.

The Twisted Experiments

Many things have been created and discovered in the name of science. Many of these things have been beneficial and put to good use for all of humanity.

However there are some scientists so obsessed, or deranged, that they push the normal conventions of research past the limit and have produced some truly horrifying results.

Man-fly (Mutated)

Description: What was once a normal human now stands as a monstrosity; terrible, disgusting, and vile.
